ENGLISH 422 reveals the power of the impact we can have upon one another. The students of Professor Abbie Cutter's English 422 class are not thinking of that impact as they interact and react, sharing their inner thoughts and lives through their writings . The resulting effect of their time together is intense; eventually leading to the death of one student, the success of another, and the discovery of a new life for a third. Professor Cutter appears to be more a facilitator than a professor, as she uses herself to create an interactive environment among her young, graduating students. The reader will observe that in addition to the English education of one group of college students, this unique novel presents an abbreviation of life itself . The student's experiences are stories within the story; and the dramatic, life-changing events that evolve, will keep you riveted! One cannot escape identifying with one or more of the characters, nor can one escape seeing the need of becoming more keenly aware of the profound influence we can have on others. "A must read for anyone who is curious about the passion that fuels the writing process." - Dr. K. Marinucci - Assistant Visiting Professor, Hofstra University. Former Professor at NYU and State University, New York.
